

15 ways to develop the ability to make sound judgments

Identify the practices you already master and those that need to be implemented

LeaderZone on mission

In an era of profound transformations within society, developing modern leadership is one of your priorities so that your organization can remain relevant and stand out through its resilience and innovation.

Modern leaders are:

- Visionaries and aligned with a purpose
- Mobilizers of committed employees
- Inclusive and concerned about the well-being of everyone
- Leaders of efficiency and evolution
- Instigators of actions and results

They know that without inner solidity, there is no outside influence and that there are no 36 ways to achieve this: update your skills.

Allow us to help you want to be leaders!

Want to self-evaluate to evolve? A diagnostic every month (free)

<https://leaderzone.ca/diagnostic>

Self-awareness

Practices	I already do it	To develop	Not applicable
You clarify your intentions and what motivates your desire to make a judgment.
You analyze the principles, values or references and check if you are not biased in your judgment.
You think, write, and share your thoughts with someone you trust before bringing your judgment out into the open.

Acquired expertise

Practices	I already do it	To develop	Not applicable
You compare what is different and what is similar between a current situation and a previous experience.
Every Friday, you do a mini review (reflection) of your most important learning of the week.
You take the time to ask clarifying questions, even when the decision to be made seems simple and obvious.

Analytical tools
Practices	I already do it	To develop	Not applicable
You collect all the information and data that will help you better analyze a particular situation; you diversify the sources.
You specify the objectives to achieve, the success criteria and the indicators that measure the relevance of your judgment
You use technological tools to analyze and make an interpretation of the current situation and future projections.

Strategic anticipation
Practices	I already do it	To develop	Not applicable
You keep yourself continuously informed; you stay up to date with economic, social, technological news, etc.
You plan for the perfect scenario and for the worst as consequences of a judgment you are about to make.
With a spirit of resilience, you prepare yourself to bounce back if things don't go as planned.

Collaborative consultation

Practices	I already do it	To develop	Not applicable
You identify trusted people in your network, their expertise, and how to benefit from their input when a need to consult them arises.
You clarify your team decision-making method and communicate the structure of the process to ensure the alignment of all collaborators.
You put yourself in the other person's shoes and look at the situation from their perspective. You take a step back before judging.

I am committed to

